- Discussion on Solar Power

There was a general discussion among those present on the current and potential future use of solar power in Allenstown, for municipal, residential, and private/business use.

Mr. Goodine discussed a pending contract to add solar panels to the community center and wanted to bring it to the Committees attention for discussion prior to implementation, as it was previously stated that following the completion of the current effort on community power, the Committee could potentially expand its activities to look at other energy initiatives in Allenstown, including the wider use of solar power installations.

Mr. Goodine advised that the contract to install solar panels on the community center had been delayed for a period of time but was now ready to proceed. There followed general discussions on the contract, installation, maintenance, etc. of the solar panels and a concern was raised about the adequacy of the community center roof to both support the installation as well as the age of the roofing shingles and whether or not they would outlive the life of the installation or would need to be replaced earlier, with the resultant costs associated with removal and reinstallation of the solar panels. A question was also raised about the Town insurers' position relative to liability insurance for solar panels.

As no definitive information was available upon which to base a decision or recommendation to proceed, it was ultimately decided to table the discussion pending an inspection of the community center roof.

There was further discussion regarding the currently allowable uses for solar installations as regulated by the Zoning Ordinance. It was acknowledged that work would need to be done to amend the ordinance to accommodate expanded use of solar siting in town, including the potential use of installations for the commercial generation of energy for sale, and for uses where power generated by solar installations are not exclusively required to be used for the structure to which they are attached or intended.
