Even

I think we need that for loading hose in the crosslays. Let me have them draw the truck and we can tweak it as necessary. I perceive we are very close to having this right.

Here's where you money stands

Equipment allowance-$ 39,403 (To be purchased through Greenwood with truck)

Total for Mini-Pumper-$ 205,341

$244,744 total contract amount for keeping the lease payment equal to Engine 1

Chris,

We got all the info and pictures, thank you. Couple things in the specs there still shows the dunnage box and handrails, should this be removed now we are no longer going that route. I also did not see the addition of mounts needed for two pike poles. Lastly, with all the changes how does that change the numbers? I am already putting together a list of equipment need for the mini-pumper it self and additional things as mentioned. Thank you for your time and have a good day.

Good afternoon;

I know with a raging snowstorm you probably don't really have time to look at fire truck specs....but I wanted to pass this along.

The specs have been changed to have a flat top style body with a hinged lid should tank repairs be needed.

I also will be forwarding you a bunch of e-mails with photos of trucks Warner has built. They presently have a mini-pumper coming on line and will share those photos as it moves along.

With this truck and the lease information we provided hopefully we are close to your needs.

Once you give me the up/down on this spec they will do a new drawing as well.

Thank you
